

Photo Gallery

Leadership, Innovation and the Global Firm

November 6-7, 2007

[Note: Photos © Nathan Mandell]

KIN Co-Founder and Kellogg Professor, Robert C. Wolcott, kicks off the Fall Dialogue with a dynamic opening statement.

Marla Capozzi frames the discussion with a preview of McKinsey & Company's latest study on leadership and innovation in global companies.

BP's Dr. Phiroz P. "Daru" Darukhanavala responds to another KIN delegate's comments.

The CEO panel, moderated by Betsy Holden (far left), was led by (from left) W. James Farrell, Former Chairman & CEO of Illinois Tool Works, Carol Bernick, Executive Chairman of Alberto-Culver Company, and Miles D. White, Chairman & CEO of Abbott Laboratories.

Dean's Advisory Board Member and Former Kraft Co-CEO, Betsy Holden, during participant introductions.

KIN delegates observe Capozzi's presentation.

Wrigley's Cindy Karasik engages in small group discussions in the afternoon of Day One.

Brian Ralphs and Cisco System's Michael Collins talk following Ralph's presentation.

Irving Oil's Joe Wheeler discusses challenges to driving successful innovation.

Professor Bob Cooper responds to Capozzi's presentation.

Professor Kotler and Paypal's Don Fotsch talk while awaiting the CEO Panel Session. The Dean's Advisory Board and KIN delegates assembled for the dynamic, closed-door discussion.

Carol Bernick shares practices and insights from the perspective of a top corporate leader.

Distinguished Kellogg Professor Philip Kotler and Core Techs' Nelson Levy talk.

Kellogg Professor James Conley takes a break with other KIN delegates.

KIN delegates approach CEO panelists following the session.

Kellogg Dean, Dipak Jain, talks with W. James Farrell following the CEO Panel Session.

Wolcott opens Day Two by recapping previous discussions and framing the day's conversation.

BP's Dr. "Daru" Darukhanavala delivers the first Executive Perspective.